

MADRID NEVER FORGET

Spain commemorates 6-year anniversary of train bombings

Alex Martin prepares a display of flowers in front of the Atocha Renfe station Thursday morning in Madrid. Trade unions CCOO, UGT and la Unión de Actores sponsored the memorial in front of the train station rocked most by the attacks six years ago.

Populist Party member David Pérez, president of the autonomous community of Madrid Esperanza Aguirre, city mayor Alberto Ruiz-Gallardón and others commemorate the sixth anniversary of the Madrid train bombings Thursday in Puerta del Sol. People across the political spectrum joined in the wreath-laying ceremony.

Six years have passed since Islamist terrorism came to Madrid's commuter train system. Between 7:01 and 7:40 a.m. on March 11, 2004, ten bombs exploded on Cercanías trains between the Alcalá de Henares and Atocha stations, killing 191 people and wounding more than 1,800.

A Moroccan inspired by al-Qaida was arrested in connection with the bombing, leading citizens to believe the attack was in response to Spain's entrance into the Iraq war by populist president José María Aznar.

The attacks occurred three days before Spain's general elections, which resulted in the defeat of incumbent Asnar.

Spain withdrew its forces from Iraq within three months of the election.

SANTIAGO, CHILE

Aftershock hits inauguration

BY MICHAEL WARREN
The Associated Press

A series of aftershocks from last month's devastating quake rocked Chile on Thursday as a new president was sworn into office and immediately urged coastal residents to move to higher ground in case of a tsunami.

The strongest aftershock, magnitude 6.9, was nearly as strong as the quake that devastated Haiti on Jan. 12. There were no immediate reports of damages or injuries.

The Chilean Navy issued a tsunami warning while the U.S. Pacific Tsunami Warning Center said the aftershocks were too small to cause dangerous waves beyond Chile's central coast.

President Sebastian Pinera was inaugurated at a congressional building in Valparaiso before the building was evacuated as a precaution. The seven aftershocks strongly swayed buildings, shook windows and sent frightened people streaming into the street.

The magnitude-6.9 aftershock is the strongest since the Feb. 27, magnitude-8.8 quake. It occurred along the same fault line, said geophysicist Don Blakeman at the U.S. Geological Survey. The USGS initially estimated the aftershock's magnitude at 7.2.

Chile's navy issued a tsunami warning. The government's emergency office — much criticized for failing to issue a tsunami alert that might have saved hundreds of lives from the towering waves that followed the initial quake — urged Chileans to seek higher ground even though the epicenter of Thursday's biggest shock was inland.

Outgoing President Michelle Bachelet says she's leaving Chile in good shape in the wake of the February quake, handing off the government to the first right-wing president in 52 years.

Pinera, a billionaire investor and Harvard-trained economist planned a working visit Thursday to the coastal city of Constitución, where the tsunami destroyed the scenic downtown, and a late-night Cabinet session.

Last month's earthquake — the fifth-strongest since 1900 — killed 500 identified victims and potentially hundreds of others, destroyed or heavily damaged at least 500,000 homes and broke apart highways and hospitals. Repairing infrastructure alone will cost $5 billion, and overall recovery costs could soar above $15 billion.

Pinera has promised to maintain social programs created by Bachelet, who leaves office with 84 percent approval ratings.
